

KASEY KAHNE
USA Freedom Corps–Volunteering PSA

(:60)

Hi. I'm Kasey Kahne. You would think that as NASCAR's 2004 Rookie of the Year I get my biggest thrill driving fast, but it's off the racetrack that I get one of life's greatest rewards – helping others through volunteer service.

Working with kids is one way that I try to make a difference. The first time I visited chronically ill children in the hospital, I found out just how rewarding volunteering could be. By giving a little of my time, it brightened their day.

I was so inspired that I started my own foundation to help sick children and kids without an opportunity have a better chance at life.

Through volunteer service, you learn things about the people you're helping, and you find out a few things about yourself.

Volunteering is a rush just like taking the checkered flag. Go to volunteer.gov to find out what drives you.
